The History

A former residence of
Sir Winston Churchill

Possibly Templeton's most notable resident was Sir Winston Churchill, whose family owned the house in the early twentieth century.

Its first illustrious owner in the eighteenth century was Lady Elizabeth Templeton, after whom the house is named. Lady Templeton worked very closely with the renowned Josiah Wedgwood and her artistic influence is still prominent in Templeton House today.

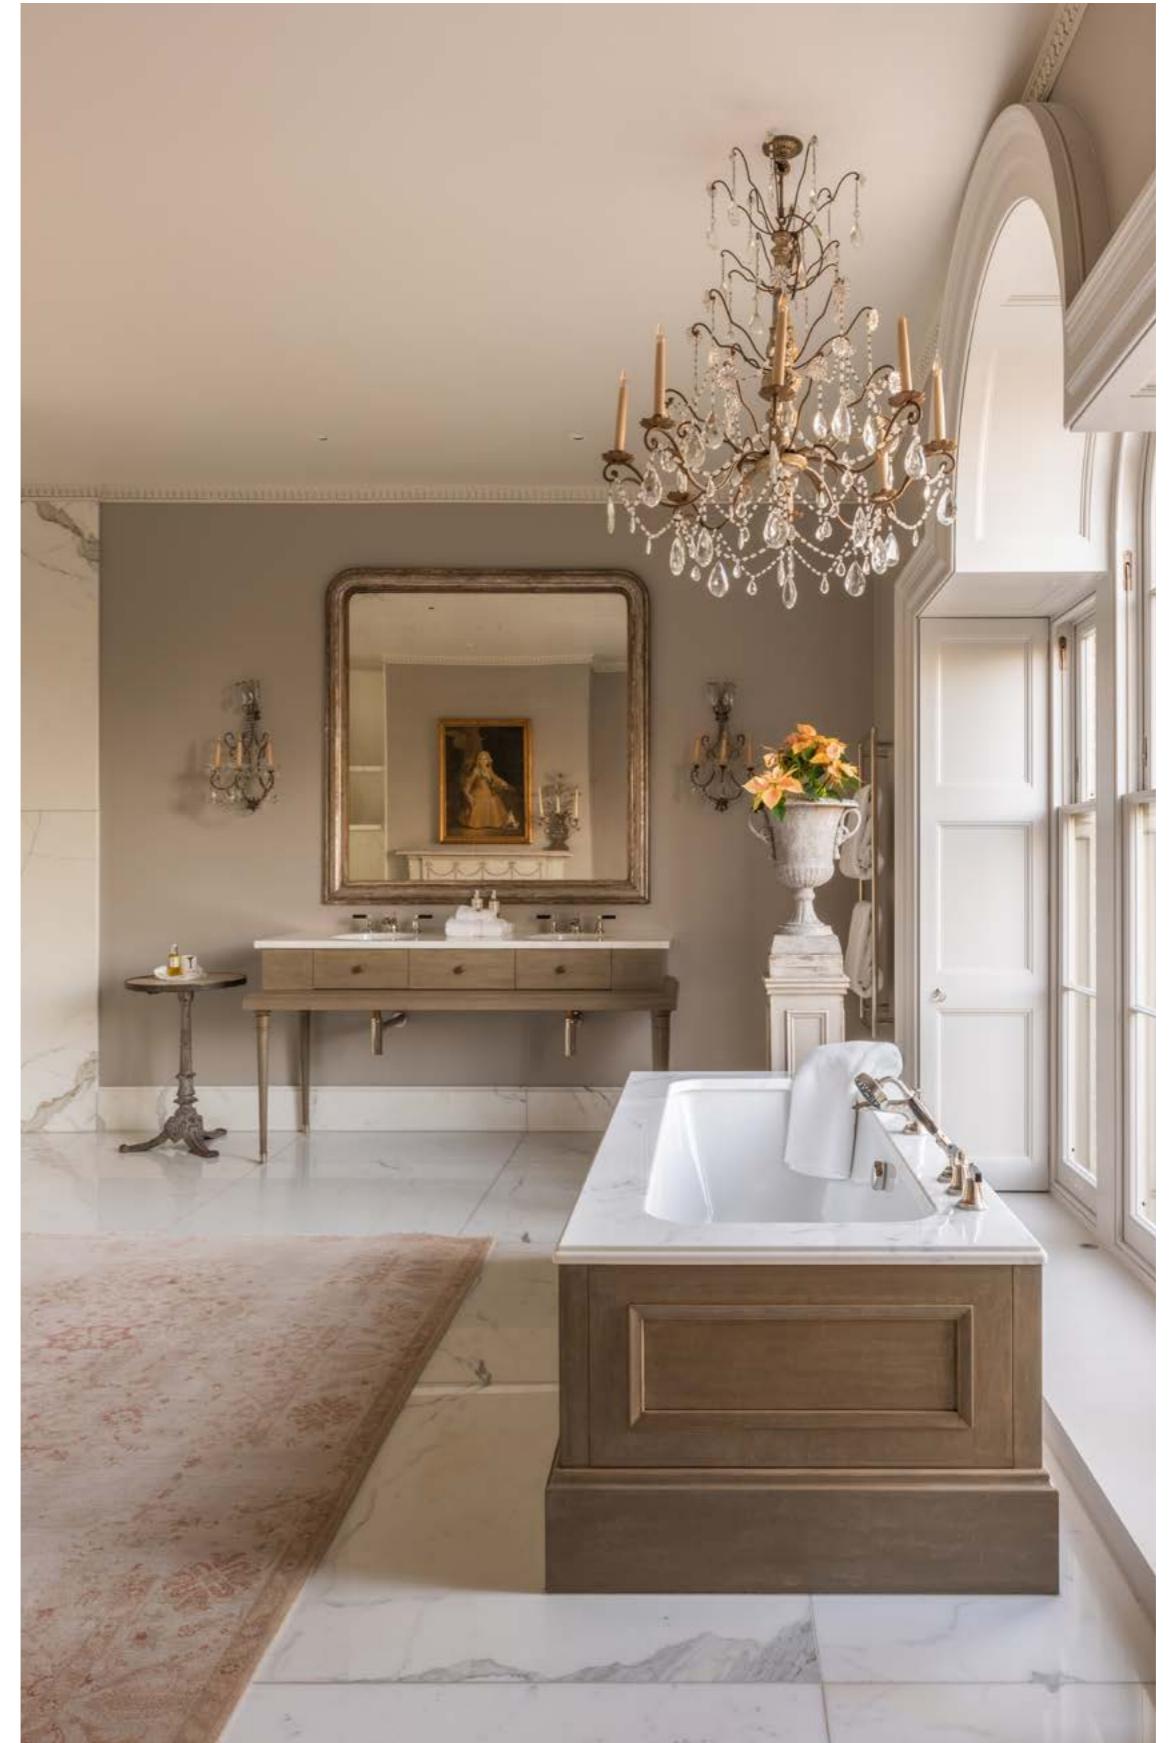

Other residents include Lord Langdale (Master of the Rolls) and Henry Lancelot Holland, Governor of the Bank of England, who was a direct descendent of the famous architect Henry Holland.
